REBEL WOMEN - FEMALE PIRATES - WOMEN'S HISTORY MONTH

A season of talks to celebrate Women's History Month

Join us as we celebrate and discover more about the badass women who broke the rules. Drawing on the knowledge of writers, performers and academics involved, we explore female piracy. Is there more to the story than swash'n'buckle? We look at trailblazers who forged their own future and followed their desire for freedom in an incredibly male dominated society. From Grace O'Malley – the 16th century Mistress of the Western Waves, a woman who was truly before her time to Anne Bonny and Mary Read, who pushed gender and sexual boundaries amidst the cutlasses and marauding on the high seas, we take a closer look at what made them tick and how their stories have inspired the writers and artists taking part.

OCEAN OPTIMISM: IS THERE REALLY HOPE FOR THE OCEANS?

The ocean belongs to all of us, so we all have a role to play in helping to ensure it has a sustainable future.

Public awareness of our oceans and the threats they face has probably never been as high as it is today. Blue Planet 2 kept us spellbound by bringing the wonders of deep into people's homes like never before, but then brought us back down to Earth by highlighting the dangers of overfishing, plastic pollution and climate change. News headlines regularly warn about how we will run out of fish by mid-century, if ocean warming doesn't cook them, or ocean acidification doesn't dissolve them, first. While these threats are real, if sometimes exaggerated, there seems to be much less focus on how to tackle them. In this talk, I will present stories from both my own research and experiences about how scientists, conservationists and coastal communities are slowly turning the tide. The ocean belongs to all of us, so we all have a role to play in helping to ensure it has a sustainable future.

THE CLOUD FOREST: FILM SCREENING + DISCUSSION

Can small people, in small places, doing small things, change the world?

Spanish with English subtitles | Ages 10+ | Documentary

Sometimes, ordinary people can make extraordinary change. Join us for a free film screening and discussion of as part of Climate Week North East 2021 (#CWNE21) to explore community resilience and how we can "be the change".

One of Mexico's most remarkable ecosystems, the cloud forest, is under threat as coffee plantations, cattle grazing and an increase in human population all take their toll. In response, the people of a small town in Veracruz take it upon themselves to "be the change" and protect this unique habitat. Building their own homes, schools and farms, they set out to restructure their entire culture, from the food they grow to their children's education, radically redefining their relationship with nature – and each other – along the way. With birdsong, the sound of water flowing and the wind as its only musical soundtrack, this gentle, contemplative documentary offers an intimate and inspiring portrait of community resilience.
